Robocall from Superintendent Cook

Good morning, this is Andrew Cook with the Hartford Central School District. Late last night it was brought to my attention that there is a concern in our food delivery chain for Friday's lunch. Upon learning this information, I immediately spoke with the Washington County Department of Health. The representative from the health department was not of any initial concerns with delivering and consuming the meals that were prepared for today. However, out of an abundance of caution, we have elected not to serve these meals. In an effort to continue to provide meals, I have coordinated with the Granville Central School District and the Whitehall Central School District, and they have graciously offered to supply the district with lunches for today while we await further information.

Due to the coordination the meal deliveries may occur a little later than normal. I appreciate your continued support of the district and your understanding and flexibility with this morning's announcement.
